

But Hermione had given Harry something else to think about as he climbed back into bed. The dog was guarding something. ... What had Hagrid said? Gringotts was the safest place in the world for something you wanted to hide — except perhaps Hog-warts.

It looked as though Harry had found out where the grubby little package from vault seven hundred and thirteen was.

